

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An imaging device for a microscope comprises an electronic camera which images an observation image captured by the microscope, a display which displays an observation image imaged by the electronic camera and photograph information of the observation image, and a display setting portion which controls the display to set display of the photograph information.